This Week's Reflection

Trusting God

I believe that Putin's invasion of Ukraine is an example of sinfully misused human freedom.

In my life, I constantly choose to trust what I do not understand.

Some divine actions are beyond human comprehension, see: Isaiah 55:8-9.

We will understand in the future more than we understand in the present, 1 Corinthians 13:12.

The more we obey God today, the more we may understand him tomorrow.

And what we do not understand in this life, we will understand in the next.

Obedience positions us to experience God's best, whenever and whatever that is.

At times I trust God more, than I understand God.

My favourite prayer in the bible is from the father, with the demon-possessed son, who in reply to the words of Jesus, that all things are possible for one who believes (Mark 9:23), responded, "Lord, I believe; help my unbelief!" (v. 24).

Why should make this prayer your own today.

This is happening at Waitara!
